

Justice and solidarity

Fundación Tzedaká is a civil society organization founded in 1991 within the Jewish community. It serves its most vulnerable members while also operating programs open to the broader society.

Fundación Tzedaká works to improve the living conditions of people facing risk and vulnerability.

With its strong track record, scalable programs, broad reach, ability to mobilize financial and volunteer resources, significant budget, and commitment to collaborative work, Fundación Tzedaká is one of Argentina's largest social organizations. A total of 6,500 individual donors, companies, and institutions contribute to sustaining its mission.

What We Do

Tzedaká means Justice and Solidarity. The restoration of every person's right to live with dignity. Guided by this principle, we develop social programs that provide effective and efficient solutions to thousands of people in need.
